

Daffodil 'Hawera'

Narcissus 'Hawera' is a small lemon-yellow daffodil that makes up for its size by producing six to eight flowers per stem. The mid-spring bloomer stands only eight inches tall. Plant it along a path, at the front of a border, or in a rock garden where it can naturalize and come back to bloom in subsequent years. Deer and rodents leave daffodils alone because they contain a bitter toxic alkaloid called lycorine. Available from Colorblends.com, a Connecticut-based flower bulb wholesaler that sells direct to landscape professionals and home gardeners coast-to-coast with a $60 minimum.
