

Hillside Mix in Spring - Janie McCabe/Colorblends.com

In a new garden tucked along a wooded hillside facing her client's house, Connecticut landscape designer Janie McCabe added stone walls and steps, then filled in with many yards of local compost. By fall, she was ready to plant and focused on perennials, tucking in surprise clusters of flower bulbs, too. The next spring, her client was thrilled. 'After a long gray winter, he hadn't realized how much spring color would mean to him," she says.
