

Snake's Head, Fritillaria meleagris

Snake's head (Fritillaria meleagris) is a mid-spring blooming bulb flower with an appealing wildflower look. It thrives in damp areas and partly shady sites, including: woodland areas, meadow fringes, along brooks and by ponds. The checkered, maroon bell-shaped blooms are pendant and nod daintily on a spring breeze. The occasional white bloom sets off darker companions. They are considered deer resistant. Available from Colorblends.com, a Connecticut-based flower bulb wholesaler that sells direct to landscape professionals and home gardeners coast-to-coast with a $60 minimum.
