

Wild Tulips in Kazakhstan - Arie Peterse/TulipsintheWild.com

Tulipsinthewild.com offers a rare glimpse of wild tulips in their native habitats in the remote mountains and barren steppes of Kazakhstan in Central Asia. In this shot by Dutch tulip hunter Arie Peterse Tulipa kaufmanniana berkariensis is captured in bloom following the spring snow melt in the Aksu Zhabagly Nature Reserve in Kazakhstan. Arie notes: wild boars like to dig up and eat the bulbs of this tulip, drawn by the taste and high starch. (TulipsintheWild.com, image courtesy of Arie Peterse).
