Rose hybridizer and writer David C. H. Austin (1926-2018) founded David Austin Roses in 1969 in Shropshire, England. Mr. Austin is best known for introducing English Roses, in which he combined the romantic flower forms and scents of Old Roses with the repeat flowering, health and color range of modern roses. To date, the David Austin Roses breeding program has introduced nearly 200 English Rose varieties. The Austin nursery, show gardens and plant center in the village of Albrighton, England draw visitors from around the globe.
